

MESSAGE FROM EDITORIAL BOARD

Welcome to yet another interesting issue of PGLJ. It gives us great pleasure to share with you that we have successfully completed 3 continuous years of publication of this journal comprising of high-quality, peer-reviewed and relevant articles which have become a treasury of knowledge and ready reckoner for pediatric gastroenterologists and pediatricians alike. As this journal molts the cover of infancy to make way for its anticipated growth into an indexed journal, we are happy to unveil the following sections in the upcoming issues of PGLJ.

Case based review: Recurrent jaundice has been a challenge for both pediatrician and pediatric gastroenterologist alike. Dr. Jaya Agrawal has illustrated several cases with take home message after each case. We hope this will stimulate learning for all.

Drug review: Almost one third of the children attending a pediatrician's office presents with common gastrointestinal symptoms. We have included a review on common drugs in pediatric gastroenterology ailments by Dr. Umesh Reddy.

Case report: Individual case reports describing unique presentations, challenging diagnosis and comprehensive treatment are also a great learning source for everyday practice. In this issue we have a case report on "Abernethy malformation masquerading as congenital heart disease: a boy with cyanosis, clubbing and hypoxia"

Journal watch and publication by ISPGHAN members: In the regular column on Journal watch, Dr. Rimjhim would take us through abstracts of some interesting recently published articles. Aristotle said "Knowing yourself is the beginning of all wisdom." Dr. Prasanth has collated recent publications of our own ISPGHAN members.

Quiz: To tickle your brains we have planned a pictorial and case based quiz. The answer will be revealed in the next issue of PGLJ.

Beyond Gut sense: We have a special column to stimulate our sixth sense under the heading "Beyond Gut sense".

It only takes a pen to transmute from a reader to an author. Arouse the author in you to contribute to PGLJ and encourage your students and fellows to submit their work which will be revised under the guidance of experienced reviewers. PGLJ is the perfect place to showcase your work even as a novice to national and international community of pediatric gastroenterologists. Please submit your manuscripts in word format to pglj.ispghan@gmail.com.

Happy reading !
